PACIFIC AVIATION MUSEUM PEARL HARBOR FORD ISLAND, HAWAII

Above: The retired B-25, a Hickam landmark, was removed to be a part of the Pacific Aviation Museum at Ford Island. The B-25 was best known for a daring raid on Tokyo in April 1942 led by Lt. Col. Jimmy Doolittle.

Top: Syd Jones (restoration director) Bob Butsch and Bob Meyland (owner of the Stearman) disassemble the Stearman that will be part of PAM. It is the plane the former President Bush flew solo on Dec 17th, 1942.

Aviation museum breaks ground

Hawaii's first military aviation museum located on Ford Island, the Pacific Aviation Museum broke ground March 21 at its historical Hangar 37.

The museum's mission is to tell the story of military aviation in the Pacific by showing the patriotism, valor and sacrifice military and civilian men and women made in the Pacific.

Complementing present historical attractions at Pearl Harbor, PAM's construction of Phase I launched immediately and should cost approximately $11 million.

"The PAM will be a great addition to the existing Pearl Harbor Historic sites and will tell the rich aviation story of Pearl Harbor," said Allan Palmer, executive director and chief executive officer. "Thanks to the generosity and support of our community, this museum is becoming a reality and will continue to honor the bravery and commitment of those who have dedicated their lives to the defense of freedom."

A significant collection of original historical artifacts PAM acquired will be assembled for display in hangar 37, with an emphasis on World War II and additional displays on the Korean War, Vietnam War, Cold War and modern air power.

PAM's collection includes aircraft from the World War II, Korea and Vietnam eras including a Navy Wildcat fighter, an Army Air Corps B-25 Mitchell bomber, a Japanese Zero fighter and a 1942 Stearman Biplane flown by former President George W. H. Bush during World War II.

PAM will display an all-encompassing spotlight of achievements for those who flew the front lines, as well as the heroes on the home front designing, building and repairing the planes.

In addition to the 17 aircraft currently in the collection, other aircraft will be acquired from private sources and the Department of Defense through loan or donation.

The museum will not be comprised of rows of airplanes parked on a hangar floor. Rather, the museum will capture the context and experiences of history within a dramatic venue, immersed in the moment standing at the epicenter of the attack.

The museum is seeking volunteers to assist with airplane restoration, lecturers and tour guides for its grand opening December 7. For more information, call 836-7747 or www.pacificaviationmuseum.org

A1C Amy Rogers
15th Civil Engineer Squadron
Liquid Fuels Technician

Your unit rocks because: 15th CES Liquid Fuels maintenance keeps the 15th Airlift Wing a ready and mobile unit. The high spirit of Liquid Fuels members makes for a fun and exciting working environment.

My job affects all of Hickam in that: The members of 15th CES maintain the systems supplying all of the fuel needs of Hickam AFB and Bellows AFS. As we like to say “Without Fuel Pilots are Pedestrians”

When not at work, I spend my off duty time: Working on my art skills, reading, playing video games, helping around the dorms in dorm projects, and just hanging out with my friends.

Something people don’t know about your unit: Most people take the water, electricity and fuel that we use on a daily basis for granted. We constantly maintain these systems in the ditches and man-holes where nobody sees us. Behind the scenes we keep the base going.

If I could change one thing about Hickam, it would be: That there would be more choices of restaurants located on base within walking distance of the dormitories. I am very excited about the new Mini-mall currently under construction.

What the supervisor has to say: A1C Rogers is an inspiration to all members of our shop. She works hard to advance in her career field knowledge on a daily basis. She also holds the office of vice president of the 15th CES Dormitory Council. She was instrumental in winning first place in the dorm competition earning $1,500 for dorm residents.
